Astonishing Recoveries.

Many a time and oft Tilden sent a wizard of a shot through that Shimizu appeared to have no chance at all of reaching. The best that was expected of the Nipponese on those occasions was to get the racquet on the ball, yet he bobbed up at the right place somehow and not only sent the ball back safely but turned it into a winning pass. The gallery was kept applauding constantly.

Tilden was willing to forsake his net game in the third set after his hard effort in the second and it was nearly all baseline in the final division of the second fame and the second and it was nearly all baseline in the final division.

pass. The gallery was kept applauding constantly.

Tilden was willing to forsake his net game in the third set after his hard effort in the second and it was nearly all baseline in the final division of play, but just as sensational as a net game would have been. The drives on both sides went through with clan nd the rallies proved to be the best sustained of the match. Games went on service to the seventh, when Shimizu by some remarkable court covering broke through and took the lead at 4—3. Tilden, however, by a supreme effort retaliated in the next game and brough the score to 4—all, and in the next two games, although extended to the limit, ended the match in his favor.

and in the next two games, although extended to the limit, ended the match in his favor.

In a doubles match that followed, the national champlonship team of Tilden and Vincent Richards met defeat at the hands of Shimizu and Francis T. Hunter, the American indoor title holder, by a score of 2—6, 6—4, 6—4, Tilden and Richards who the first set so easily that the shift in the tide came as a decided surprise. Tilden, however, did not play with as much ambition in doubles as he had in singles and contributed numerous errors toward the end that were factors in the defeat. Richards, too, seemed to lose steam and control in the last set. Hunter and Shimizu, on the other hand, gained speed with every game and earned the victory by their superior attack. The point score and stroke analysis of the singles match follow:

JEROME D. TRAVERS

Former Champion Is Entered in New Jersey Tourney Over Norwood Links.

Last year Jerome D. Travers made at Golf Association's amateur cha ship and failed. There have been rumors around for several weeks that Jerome never again will seek the road where the thisties grow, where the path leads upward and where the burning sun packs an extra load upon the shoulders of the struggling, perspiring wayfarer. It is so much easier to dawdle alok, in the shady lanes or loll beside the limpid pools.

But Travers is not exactly built that way it seems. In his makeup there is something of the battle charger. He has been through the mill and likes it. And so his name has been received once more for the New Jersey championship, which is to be decided Thursday, Friday and Saturday of this week over the Norwood links.

accompanied O'Neill.

French turf followers were considerably disturbed over reports received ere that Pondoland had gone lame, as they had backed the horse heavily in the future books owing to O'Neill having the mount.

ONE ARM FREE RULE YACHTS TUNING UP BOON TO HUGGERS

Holding and Hitting at Same Time.

By CHARLES F. MATRISON.

The steady growth of the clinching evil in Greater New York boxing clubs, will start in the first race of the season due in a measure to the "one arm free" hitting with the other is foul. It is also foul to persistently clinch. Therefore it should be made clear to referees that a boxer must not hold and hit at the same time. Yet if an opponent holds one arm of a contestant the latter may hit with his free arm: or, if a boxer is beld by an opponent about the neck or body and his hands are free he may hit with both.

his free arm; or, if a boxer is beld by an opponent about the neck or body and his hands are free he may hit with both.

Nothing was more pleasing to Terry should be the hower of the clincher. The Govern than to have an opponent hold him by the neck or shoulders while his hands were free. Terrible Terry soon brought the hugging to an end by battering the ribs of the clincher.

Pensity for Clinching.

The Queensberry code contained a brief reference to clinching. "There shall be no holding," was the rule, but there was no pensity for violation. The Walker law is more explicit, it declares that "persistent holding" and "htiting" are foul, and gives the rest. Walker law is more explicit, it declares that "persistent holding and hitting" are foul, and gives the reference authority to penslize offenders. Yet the boxer who is not holding may hit with one or both hands even though his opponent is holding.

In the recent Greb-Tunney contest by holding and hitting. Tunney was quite as much at fault as Greb, the only difference being that Greb inflicted greater punishment at close quarters. It would have been unjust to penslize one and not the other. However, Referee McPartiand conformed to his "one arm free" in structions and permitted both men to hit while holding.
